VILLAGE HALL NEWS

Horton Village Hall Management Committee

Horton Village Hall re-opened on the 19th July 2021 after 16 months of Covid regulations and we are now looking forward to a more sustainable year. The Booking Secretary has been busy sorting out returning deposits for cancelled bookings and then various remedial works were carried out during this closed period i.e. replacing the dado rail, failed emergency light, annual servicing of alarm system and checking fire extinguishers also regular hedge and grass cutting. We received this year a Sculpture (made by Patience Bastow) and kindly donated by Bernard Hill in memory of Patience. A Silver Birch tree was planted by Jean Layzell and family in memory of Jean's husband Ken. Bookings and enquiries are now being received and many of the regular clubs and classes will be resuming from September. I would like to thank members and friends of the Hall who have assisted as and when required during the Pandemic. At the next Committee meeting a date will be set for the AGM (details to follow).

HORTON: HERE'S A HOW! ...WITH CONTINUED APOLOGIES TO DR SEUSS

COLLINS & SON, CLOTHIERS & MILL OWNERS: Pt. 1: The Cleals of Puddlebridge were a middling clothier family. The Collins family of Horton, both mill owners and clothiers, were more impressive influencers on Ilminster's textile trade. Indeed, they probably impacted the town's 18th century economy much as the Spekes did its Church and Manor despite their likely lower social standing. The roots of this Collins enterprise are hard to pinpoint. The earliest reference to a Collins family is found in the will of William Collins, 'gent of Ilminster' written on 21st December 1586 when 'sicke in body but sounde of minde' and proven in March 1587. A brother Robert, a wife Thomazine and sons John and Thomas are his kin. For the next 300 years or so, the names William, Robert, John and Thomas appear repeatedly alongside an increasingly common Collins surname. Confusing for contemporaries perhaps but now, with no complete Collins family tree, it's even more so. However, wills by subsequent Collins of Ilminster throw up some discrete family relationships. The earliest are 'Town Collins' who traded cloth rather than making it. Street suggests that the 1587 gent. William might have been a merchant too¹. John Collins of Ilminster, 1607 was a linen draper; Thomas Collins of Ilminster's will of 1696 says he's a Mercer of Ilminster or trader in fine or luxury cloths e.g. silks or velvet not locally produced. In 1747 we have John Collins of Ilminster, haberdasher, possibly the same John whose will, probated in 1769, says he's a 'shopkeeper'. All were men of commerce, whether related or not, and comfortably off, if not precisely wealthy. The 'Hatch Beauchamp Collins' though are of a wholly different stamp. Their progenitor is John Collins of Ilminster, born 1665; possibly the 'John, serge maker' brother of Mercer Thomas (the dates fit). He's both a successful 'clothier' and 'gent' who bought land/property in Hatch Beauchamp in 1726. Clothier John's son, John Jr. was just 17 when his father died, aged 76 in 1741 taking the clothier connection with him. Known as 'John Collins of Hatch Beauchamp' 1725-1791, John Jr. matriculated from Oxford then married sugar heiress Jane Langford in 1769. A country gent, military man, and MP he extensively developed Hatch Court alongside his other local properties. His three sons, John Raw Collins 1775-1807; Henry Powell Collins 1776-1854 & Bonnor Collins 1779-? were largely London-focused and had daughters not sons, so causing their Collins name to fade.

Broadway Health Walking Group

We are back! After many months on pause, our regular Tuesday morning walks have finally been able to resume. A Health Walk is best described as 'a regular walk at a brisk pace which still allows the Walker to carry out a conversation whilst also becoming pleasantly warm'. Our walks last up to 90 minutes, many having the option to drop off after about an hour, and use the wide range of footpaths, lanes and drove roads in and around the villages of Horton and Broadway. On the 4th Tuesday of each month we explore Ilminster routes.

On the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th Tuesday we start from Standerwick Orchard Village Green in Broadway. On the 4th Tuesday we leave the front entrance of Tesco in Ilminster. All walks leave at 10.00am prompt, please arrive at 9.45am for your first walk with the group to complete brief registration formalities.

Walks are led by trained Volunteer Health Walk Leaders who will ensure you are able to walk at a comfortable pace for all. The National Health Walk Scheme was started by a GP and is increasingly popular as a way for anyone to improve their general fitness by just putting one foot in front of the other. Walking was one of the few permitted ways to exercise during the pandemic. The social benefit of walking with a group is extremely popular and an ideal way to meet new people while exploring new parts of our beautiful South Somerset countryside.

Horton Parish Council & Playing Field

The Horton Parish Council is pleased to confirm that we now have the funds to start work on installing the new equipment that was supported by the residents a while back. The contractor has been selected and given the go-ahead to purchase the various play park kits ready to install into the park. Installation will begin as soon as they have enough for the team to work with and any disruption of the playing field will kept to the minimum.

The installers are going to be excluding just that part of the park they are working on, so there should not be a complete closure. Play equipment will be available to use once it is tested and completed. It has been good to see families enjoying the park and enthusiastic games of football being played. The new play-wall will be including a goal with a rear net which should improve the games once it is installed on the revised layout. Plus for any cricketers, the play-wall includes sets of stumps as well.

The seniors amongst us have not been left out as there will be three weatherproof adult exercise units to keep your limbs active while you watch over the grand-kids playing.

A big thanks to all who have donated to the funds, given their time to help run events and generally supported the project. The results of the combined efforts of the Horton residents will be seen soon as a community asset to be enjoyed for a long time for us and future generations.

By contrast the seemingly unrelated contemporaries the 'Horton Collins' would be associated with cloth-making for over 100 years and involved 3 of their 5 Horton/Ilminster based generations. The founder of Collins & Son was Robert Collins. According to a SIAS study paper² he was already active by c.1692-3. It describes him as both a wool stapler (a dealer in wool who buys from the producer, sorts & grades it and on sells it to the manufacturer) and a 'clothier'. His greatest impact on the scene, however, came from his 'woollen manufactory' which involved both the Isle-fed water-powered mills starting with 'Horton Myll' or Hortbridge Mill, the older of the two. Street maintains that it was on the site of a pre-Domesday grain mill, whose conversion to cloth/fulling was post-1548 but before 1692. Robert also operated Rose Mill which straddled contemporary Donyatt/Horton boundaries and was built later but pre-1814. These mills are believed, latterly at least, to have worked in tandem; one as a weaving shed (Hortbridge) the other as a fulling mill (Rose). Only Rose Mill still exists although its early footprint may have been overwritten since Robert's day. Hortbridge Mill's chequered history ran on beyond making woollen cloth, gravitating through horsehair or silk then converting, by 1876, to a grist and sawmill & grain store before being taken on, then rebuilt as Horlicks Dairy by 1903. It was eventually reduced to the rubble we see today on the B3168/Station Road, Ilminster in 2002.

Robert probably saw profit in extending from wool stapler to manufacturer, but no order books or accounts exist to prove it. Few mechanical details pre-date the 1800s, so we can only draw on the SIAS study (qv), a recent study of Exeter's cloth industry³ (to which Taunton/Ilminster clothmaking was aligned) and contemporary accounts by traveller Celia Fiennes⁴ to envisage how Collins & Son's operations affected the locality. Sited by the road, Hortbridge Mill alone was described in 1876 as '72 ft long by 26ft wide, having five storeys' containing a '14ft diameter iron waterwheel 5ft 2 ins high with driving shafts', with a 6-bedroomed 'convenient dwelling house' alongside plus 'stables, large piggeries and a rich close of meadow land'. In 1814 Rose Mill was described as 'having an adjoining circular drying house' along with a 'fulling mill with 2 waterwheels, each with 2 working stocks together with a dye house, rack and hatches and a Mill Pond ... and a newly built weaving shop'. Exactly how much of all that existed in Robert's day we don't know but anything even half that size would have dominated the flat landscape in terms of sight, sound, and smell. These latter two would derive from the first part of the 2-stage fulling operation as all newly woven woollen cloth needed heavy wooden hammers (fulling stocks) to scour away grease and dirt. The cloth was soaked in urine (best after drinking beer!), then soaped before the stocks imitated, quite violently according to Celia, the movement of 'treading the cloth underfoot'. This rendered the cloth fit to use but did not, surprisingly, damage it. Some cloths, notably broadcloth and the better form of serges, needed a longer second-stage fulling as part of the finishing process. That involved beating the cloth in a trough with the stocks to achieve a felting or thickening/shrinking. Then it needed drying and 'tentering' (cloth attached to iron tenterhooks on wooden frames to dry and reshape). This took place in adjacent fields or in a drying linhay or dry house (an open fronted roofed structure, with tenterhooks fixed to beams/frames within the building). Once dry, the cloth was finished by having its nap or surface raised by locally grown teasels and then 'sheared' either by hand or latterly machine to a smooth/refined finish. That was a skilled job, but we know that the many other processes involved not only local men and women but children too. The tentering operations, like the mills, would have been highly visible. 'Rack Close' near Horton Cross Farm was named for its part in what also attracted Celia Fiennes' eye, namely fields full of multi-coloured tented cloths. Exeter mill owners often 'sub-let' their mills or processed cloth on behalf of others. Whilst Robert's actual model here is unknown, in his will of 1724 (proven in 1729), he left 'all my shears press planks and all other implements belonging to the dressing of cloth' and 'my little dye furnace with what belongs to it' to his second son, William. That seems pretty 'hands on' to me. Next time: The man & his family.
